Supporting healthier school communities

Data from the New Brunswick Health Council's population health profile supported the implementation of universal school meal programs by demonstrating that a significant proportion of children and youth were not eating breakfast every day.

Supporting Data-Informed Community Action

The data from the New Brunswick Health Council is really helpful in our work because it paints a community-wide portrait of what people are experiencing...The data help us to understand the trends in mental health, and housing, and personal well-being, which helps us to identify where supports are needed the most.
